the 1990s, the number of people in the UK who are employed in the public sector has increased from 10.5 million to 12.5 million (12.5% of the population).

There are a number of reasons for this increase. One of the main reasons is that the public sector has become a major employer of young people. In 1990, only 1.5 million young people were employed in the public sector, but by 2000, this number had risen to 2.5 million (25% of the young population).

Another reason for the increase is that the public sector has become a major employer of women. In 1990, only 5.5 million women were employed in the public sector, but by 2000, this number had risen to 7.5 million (75% of the female population).
